THROWBACK THURSDAY

Maribel Caves Hotel

Designed by Charles Steinbrecker and built in 1900 using limestone from the area, the Maribel Caves Hotel was a vacation spot and health spa until the late 1920s. The building was sold at a sheriff's auction in the early 1930s and then operated as a tavern. This photograph was taken in 1980, just five years before a fire gutted the structure's interior. Today, the remnants of the hotel are fenced off and not accessible to the public.
